

Two Killed, Eight Injured In Automobile Accidents In This Vicinity Over Weekend

Two persons died and eight others were injured, in weekend automobile accidents in this area. The dead are:

George H. Ambrose, 64, of 107 West Main street, Waynesboro.

Mary Alice Haner, 10, of 211 West Fifth street, Waynesboro.

The Waynesboro man died at 11:56 o'clock Sunday night in the Warner hospital of a crushed chest, fractured hip and fractured skull suffered when an automobile he was driving skidded, went out of control, climbed an embankment and overturned two miles west of Cashtown on the Lincoln highway at 9:30 p. m.

The Haner girl, a passenger in the Ambrose car, died en route to the hospital of a fractured skull. Dr. C. G. Crist, Adams county coroner, said the child probably was crushed under the overturned automobile. Ambrose was driving west.

Three others were injured in the accident.

Mrs. Ora Haner, 34, mother of the dead child, suffered a slight cut on her head and body bruises.

Mrs. George Ambrose, 61, wife of the driver, suffered leg and body bruises and shock.

Mrs. Walter Ambrose, 64, 222 East Main street, Waynesboro, received a fractured right wrist and body bruises.

The injured were treated at the Warner hospital where they were brought by a York motorist.

State police of the Gettysburg substation, who investigated the accident, said there was a light rain or mist at the time and icy spots on the pavement. It was believed that the Ambrose car struck one of these patches of ice. It turned over three times after running onto the embankment and came to rest across the highway. Damage to the car was estimated at $500.

The bodies of Mr. Ambrose and the Haner child were turned over to the Grove funeral home, Waynesboro. Dr. Crist said no inquest will be held.

Double Services

Double funeral services will be held for Mr. Ambrose and the Haner child, it was announced this afternoon. The services will be conducted in the Waynesboro YMCA because the assembly hall of the Jehovah Witness sect to which they belonged is too small to accommodate the expected mourners. J. O. Tuckett will have charge of the service with interment in Green Hill cemetery, Waynesboro. Friends may call Tuesday evening at the Grove funeral home, Waynesboro.

The group was en route home from a circuit meeting of Jehovah's Witnesses at Lancaster Sunday afternoon when the accident occurred.

The child was one of three children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Haner. Besides her parents she is survived by a sister, Judith Kay and a brother, Robert Jr. Her maternal grandfather, Andrew C. Karns, Altoona, and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Alice Haner, Waynesboro, also survive.

Surviving Ambrose are his widow, the former Anna Mary Sheffer; the following children, Clarence W. Waynesboro; Mrs. H. George Eber, York; Mrs. Harold O. Heckman, Chambersburg; Mrs. Henry G. Slichter, Waynesboro; five grandchildren; and the following brothers and sisters, Walter, Benjamin, Claude and David Ambrose, and Mrs. Grace Smith, all of Waynesboro, and Mrs. B. H. Miller, Hagerstown R. 5.

Loaded Truck Spills

While state police were investigating this accident, they were called to the scene of another crash about a mile away, when a Super Lines truck skidded on ice, knocked down ten guard rails and went down an embankment, spilling the truck open and spilling a load of hats and shoes. The driver, John Landis Lynch, Nashville, Tenn., was not injured. Police estimated the damage at about $8,000.

Four persons were injured, none seriously, when an automobile operated by Max Coulson, 21, of Hanover, skidded on the Hanover-Cross Keys road a half mile north of Hanover at 12:20 a. m. Sunday and struck a bridge.

Coulson suffered a laceration of the right knee. Others injured were: Anita Gerlick, 21, Hanover, bruised legs.

William Lee, 27, Camp Holabird, Md., hand and cheek bruised. Evelyn Barnitz, 22, Hanover, (Please Turn to Page Two)

EASTER SEALS FOR CRIPPLED KIDS ON SALE

Letters asking the support of thousands of Adams countians in the annual Easter Seal Sale by the Crippled Children's Society of Adams county were placed in the mails today.

The campaign for funds with which to carry on work among the crippled children and adults of this county coincides with the state-wide sale of Easter seals in 60 other counties.

Across the state nearly a million and a half letters carrying Easter seals will be mailed, an increase of more than 575,000 over any previous seal campaign.

Use State Slogan

Conducted on the slogan, "Every Easter Seal you buy helps a crippled child," the drive has the state endorsement of veterans, business, agricultural and newspaper organizations.

Letters to Adams countians are being mailed over the signature of Dr. R. S. Saby, Gettysburg, president of the county Crippled Children's society. The Adams county society is one of 45 county units in the state affiliated with the Pennsylvania Society for Crippled Children and Adults. This seal-selling drive is the only means the county society will employ this year to secure funds with which to carry on its regular services to scores of crippled boys and girls in Adams county.

Dr. Saby said today: "The Adams County Crippled Children's Society is providing vital help to scores of less fortunate boys and girls, a large percentage of whom can be aided to enjoy a full, happy and useful life. Every time you buy and use an Easter seal you are helping these youngsters. There are 30,000 known crippled children in Pennsylvania and a share of the proceeds of the seal sale in this county will go to the state-wide program."

SUSPEND TRIPS OF BOOKMOBILE UNTIL APRIL 5

Trips by the Adams County Free Library's bookmobile to rural schools in the county today were suspended for the balance of the month in compliance with a request of health authorities, because of the prevalence of scarlet fever, a library official announced today.

In pursuance of the request, trips 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 of the bookmobile have been cancelled. Regular service will be resumed with Trip No. 1, beginning on April 5, the library said.

The request for suspension of bookmobile trips for the balance of March came from Dr. C. G. Crist, county medical director, and school nurses, according to the library.

The library, however, quoted Dr. J. Moore Campbell, director of the bureau of health conservation for Pennsylvania, to the effect that books do not spread disease.

"It is no longer thought necessary to be over-particular about school or library books and the latter, if returned from quarantined homes, might be immediately put into circulation again without any hesitancy," according to Dr. Campbell. "Books need not be burned or otherwise destroyed."

According to a library authority, several books, both school and library, have already been burned on order of the health officer because of the prevalence of scarlet fever.

Simmons Sentenced To Die In Electric Chair For Murder; Duff To Set Date

Ray H. Simmons 24, of Mechanicsburg R. 1, was sentenced by the Adams county court this morning to death in the electric chair for the murder on March 24, 1947, of Herbert L. Humpert, 70-year-old Gardner R. 1, farmer.

The formal order of sentence read by President Judge W. C. Sheely leaves the date of the execution to be fixed by the Governor. The place designated is the Western penitentiary, Centre county.

Simmons Nervous

Simmons stood erect throughout the reading of the sentence, but appeared nervous and shook slightly as the words, concluding with "May God in His infinite wisdom have mercy on your soul," were read to him.

Defense Attorney Richard A. Brown said after sentence had been imposed that it was likely that an appeal will be taken to the state Supreme court.

EXTENSION OF TURNPIKE MAY START IN FALL

Philadelphia, March 7.—The 140-mile extension of the Pennsylvania Turnpike from Carlisle to Philadelphia probably will follow a northerly route passing south of Lebanon and Reading and joining highways at King of Prussia, the Philadelphia Bulletin said Sunday.

Construction is expected to be started in the fall.

The newspaper made these other statements on the projected Turnpike extension:

"Termination near King of Prussia would dovetail with the Valley Forge Parkway project, which has been pushed by Main Line civic groups of the last year or more.

Logical Turnpike Feeder

"The Parkway, which would go eastward from Valley Forge to West Conshohocken, then follow the old river road along the west bank of the Schuylkill to City Line, would make a logical feeder for the Turnpike, its proponents say. It would also relieve the congestion along Lancaster Pike through Bryn Mawr and Ardmore.

"It also was learned that the commission hopes to finance the super- (Continued on page 7)

New Defense Move Lost

Before passing sentence, Judge Sheely turned down an appeal by Simmons' attorney for postponement of the sentence because the court opinion denying a new trial was handed down only a few minutes before the sentence was to be pronounced.

"The opinion of the court on the defendant's action for a new trial has not been filed of record so as to be available to counsel for the defendant in order to determine whether or not a petition for a reargument of said motion should be made," Attorney Brown said.

The court then asked Simmons if he knew of any reason why he should not be given the death penalty.

He answered "no" in a shaky voice.

The court's 32-page opinion handed down today answered the 43 objections filed by defense attorneys who were seeking a new trial by pointing out other cases in which similar actions were taken, by asserting that in some of the points the defense raised no objection during the trial and that therefore could not afterwards bring such objections.

One of those objections with which the court failed to agree was the statement that the accounts appearing in the local newspapers prejudiced the jury against the defendant. The court held that there was no evidence of excitement against the defendant either before or at the trial.

"The attitude of the public was one of curiosity rather than animosity, and we have no reason to believe the defendant was prejudiced. It is true that the newspapers published all of the data they could get on the case but there is nothing to show that they erroneously reported any fact or that they wrote their articles in a form designed to antagonize the public against the defendant."

Affidavit Refused

Defense Attorney Brown this morning attempted to present an affidavit signed by himself and Attorney Thomas Caldwell that then Assistant District Attorney Daniel E. Teeter during his charge called defense witness Dr. H. C. Eaton of Harrisburg, "That $500 doctor."

Brown claimed that such a remark prejudiced the jury against Doctor Eaton, who had on the stand admitted to receiving a $500 fee for appearing in Simmons' behalf.

The court refused to accept the affidavit, arguing that it did not recall the remark and that any such complaint should have been made at the time of the trial, not eight (Continued on Page Two)

RESCUE 21 MEN FROM STRICKEN MOTOR TANKER

Morehead City, N. C., March 8 (AP)—Twenty-one men were rescued today from the stricken motorship Norfolk.

While towering waves still pounded the grounded tanker, Coast Guardsmen used a breeches buoy to take the men to safety one by one. One crewman was rescued yesterday.

The 21 men, all reported in good condition, spent a dreary night aboard their battered, leaking vessel. The Norfolk, a 252-foot, 2,453-ton ship, piled into the treacherous sand reef off Beaufort inlet yesterday while in distress and trying to make harbor during a 60-mile gale.

For a time it appeared she would be broken up by the surging sea. Today Coast Guardsmen said salvage would be possible when the sea calms.

Three Injured

Coast Guard boats stood by the vessel all night in heavy fog. Bright sunshine this morning soon burned off the fog, but the waves still kept boats from going alongside and the breeches buoy brought into play. Planes roared over the area as the men transferred from the motorship to the Coast Guard vessels along the slender line.

The first 14 men were taken immediately to the Fort Macon Coast Guard station and the boats returned for the remaining seven. By mid-morning all were safely ashore.

Rescue efforts were abandoned last night because of darkness and heavy seas after the ship's electrician, who volunteered to be first, was swept from a rescue line and dashed under the keel of a Coast Guard boat. He was pulled aboard the boat and hospitalized with head injuries. Two Coast Guardsmen also were injured in the rescue operations in the 18-foot waves.

York, from the findings of a county justice in connection with a speeding charge was turned down by the court. Cluck, Attorney Donald M. Swope, said, had waived a hearing before the justice. The court then set April 16 as the time for the hearing on the speeding case.

Papers for the incorporation of the Gettysburg Recreation association and for the incorporation of the Wesley chapel of the Mont Alto charge of the Methodist church were presented to the court for approval. A libel in divorce by Mary Louise Anthony, Gettysburg, against Mark W. Anthony, charging cruel and barbarous treatment was filed.

Eight accounts were approved and precepts were handed down to the clerk and prothonotary to notify the sheriff and jury commissioners to draw juries for the April term of court.

Asks For Parole

A petition for parole of Mary Hess, Fayetteville R. D., sentenced some months ago on a charge of receiving stolen goods, was presented, but no action was immediately taken. The court stated it would hold a hearing on the matter March 20.

Roy W. Myers, Hampton, appeared in court for sentence on a charge of failing to reveal his identity at the scene of an accident. District Attorney Teeter pointed out that another defendant is to appear for trial in connection with the same case at the April term of court. The court then renewed Myers' bond and told him to appear in April for sentence.

Saturday was set as the probable date for the court to take up the matter of a parole for Stephen A. Schachle, Gardners R. D., who was sentenced February 9 on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Released From Jail

Lester Miller, Biglerville R. D., who had been in jail because of inability to raise bond, was released by the court when it was learned that he and his wife had reached an agreement. Miller was permitted to sign his own bond with arrangements to be made through Probation Officer B. E. Bixler.

John R. Shoemaker, Littlestown, was ordered to pay $6 a week for the support of his wife, Mrs. Viola Shoemaker, and to enter into a bond of $500 on his own recognizance following a hearing on a desertion and non-support case. Shoemaker told the court that he secured a Florida divorce from his wife and claimed that she "signed some papers" in the Florida case. The court told him that if he can secure proof that the wife entered an appearance in the Florida divorce action then the support order will be set aside. If such can not be proved, the court added, "the Florida divorce is illegal in Pennsylvania and I fear you have been given some bad advice."

Jerusalem, March 8 (AP)—One Arab was slain and an Arab woman was found dead in Haifa this morning, police said, apparent victims of night-long sniper fire from Jewish quarters. WIDOW WINS $22,500 PRIZE

Chicago, March 8 (AP)—The 68-year-old widow who won the rich "Walking Man" radio contest Saturday night described her exciting week-end simply today as "such fun."

"I think the best part of it has been hearing from a number of friends I haven't seen in 15 years," she said. "They called up to congratulate me."

By identifying Jack Benny, radio comedian, as the mysterious "Walking Man," Mrs. Florence Hubbard, lingerie saleswoman in a Loop department store, showered herself with prizes valued at $22,500.

She said she has not decided what to do with all the prizes. "There's much too much for my three-room apartment," she said. Besides household appliances, the prizes include a Cadillac automobile, airplane, trailer, and two-week vacation at Sun Valley, Idaho.

The contest was sponsored by Ralph Edwards of the "Truth or Consequences" program. Rules required a statement of why "we should all support the American Heart Association," along with a contribution to the organization.

Mrs. Hubbard said she submitted 30 entries during the 10 weeks of the contest because she was "very much interested in the American Heart Association. Her husband, a physician, died of a heart ailment 10 years ago.

Edwards said contributions to the association totaled approximately $1,500,000.

Redmond Prindle, chief deputy collector of internal revenue at Chicago, estimated Mrs. Hubbard would have to pay approximately $8,500 taxes, based on the cash value of her many prizes.

Ray Simmons

months later. After sentence was imposed Simmons asked the court if he might "say something." The court granted the request and Simmons said: "I would like to thank you for what you thought was a fair and honest and legitimate trial."

Simmons sat facing the court for three-quarters of an hour while other business was transacted before he was brought to sentence. He remained impassive with the exception of a slight smile at one point when Deputy Sheriff John C. Shealer leaned across him to say something to Sheriff B. W. Spence. While standing before the bar waiting for the court's sentence he chewed gum rapidly.

Mother Weeps
After sentence was imposed he was led out of the courtroom by the sheriff, passing through a jury room just off the court room. There his mother, father and brother were waiting. The mother clasped him to her and burst into tears. Simmons was led out of the room while court attendants ministered to the mother. She stated her desire to kiss her son goodbye despite objections of another son that she "could not stand it." Led to her son, who was waiting on the steps of the court house she told court attendants that "it will take not one life but two."

Simmons was found guilty in April court in 1947 for the murder of Humpert. The death was said by Coroner Dr. C. G. Crist to have taken place between the morning of March 24 and the morning of March 25, 1947. The commonwealth claimed that Robert L. Staley, 25, of Mechanicsburg, a former Adams counsellor, and Simmons had planned to rob Humpert.

Staley Given Life
Staley was sentenced to life imprisonment after being convicted in a separate trial. The jury in the Simmons' case found in favor of death for this defendant. During the trials of the two men the commonwealth claimed they went to the Humpert home on the night of March 24, or during the early morning of the next day and that Simmons beat Humpert about the head with a hammer.

Defense counsel had argued that the court had erred in its charge to the jury in making the statement, "I might say to you that in this case the court cannot see how you can fail to find a verdict of murder in the first degree." The court answered by stating that it had warned the jury that the court's opinion did not take away the responsibility of the jury to reach its decision independently and that the Supreme Court has stated "we have long recognized the right of a trial judge to express an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant, and . . . have said that it was sometimes his duty to do so."

DODDS BREAKS MILE RECORD

New York, March 8 (AP)—They've run the last mile this year at Madison Square Garden.

New York's major indoor track season came to an end in the wee hours of Sunday morning when John Viskocky of the New York athletic club missed his final try for a world's indoor high jump record.

There were five big meets—the Millrose games, the New York A. C. meet, the AAU championship, the ICA4 championships and Saturday's Knights of Columbus carnival. They produced only one new world's record, but that one was a spectacular performance.

Gil Dodds, the flying parson, circled the 11 laps of the garden's well-worn board oval in 4:05.3 in the Wanamaker mile on Jan. 31. The quick trip cut 1.1 seconds off his own previous world's record set four years ago.

Curtis Stone, late of Penn State, won three two-mile races during the season with a best time of 9:04.2. Phil Thigpen of Seton Hall beat Reggie Pearman of New York university two out of three times at the 1,000 yard distance and turned in a 2:13.6 effort Saturday night for the best time of the season.

Morrison has been mentioned as possible successor to Howie Odell as Yale football coach, but announced he intends to start spring training at Temple next week.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Tampa, Fla., March 8 (AP)—Impressions after a week in the baseball training camps: Most optimistic manager—Billy Southworth of the Braves. About the only thing talkative Billy won't say is that he's sure to win the pennant.

Most uncommunicative manager—Joe McCarthy of the Red Sox. Joe never did say much and this year he says even less.

Most enthusiastic squad—the Phillies. It's hard to tell whether the "regulars" or the "farmhands" squad has more spirit. Manager Ben Chapman seems to lean toward the farmhands.

Least enthusiastic—the Athletics. But maybe he hit them on a bad day.

Most determined—the Tigers, especially the players who took pay cuts after last season.

Best catch-grabber—Gabe Paul, the Reds assistant to the president. He can act as if he really liked to do it.

Guy who is having the most fun—Bob Carpenter, Phillies president. And he'd be happier if a sore arm didn't keep him from workout with the team.

Hardest-luck guy—Tom Swope, Cincinnati baseball writer, who took a day off to go fishing, got caught in the rain, took refuge on a porch and tried to get a strange dog. That was when Tom got the only bite of the day.

SHORTS AND SHELLS

Harold Daugherty, who's getting a trial in the Detroit infield, was a freshman halfback on the 1945 Ohio State football team. He didn't play baseball in college but took it up in the army. . . . The Red Sox Tex Hughson won 22 games in 1942, 18 in 1944 and 20 in 1946. One reason why he's hopeful now is that another "even" year is coming up. . . . Jewel Ens, Syracuse manager, worked three years developing Hank Sauer into the guy whose hitting has the Reds' camp excited. "One year he hit only 214 but I never gave up on him," Ens explains. "I knew a big, strong fellow like him should be better. He's developed into a good fielder, too."

Academy for district championship on March 16.

District eleven—Tuesday, March 9, Palmerton, unbeaten in league and independent ranks, meets Mahanoy City at Rockne Memorial hall. Saturday, March 13, Bethlehem, East Penn champions, meet winner for district championship at Penn State.

State College, Pa., March 8 (AP)—The Frank J. Goodman trophy given annually to Penn State's most representative senior athlete was won this year by Wrestler Jackie Tighe.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TWIN DESTROYERS

Rout all fear, dismiss all worry, and you immediately enter the highway of efficiency and personal happiness, for no one can do his best work, or be his best self, with these two destroyers—Fear and Worry—ever tagging at his heels.

No possible legislation can abolish fear. It can divert it to new quarters, where it thrives in a new setting. Freedom from fear has to be achieved by the individual himself. It is a matter of will and faith. Fear is a protective measure, given to us at birth. That is all, and only as such should it have any control over our lives.

Worry, however, the twin to fear, is another matter. It can perform no healthy, happy function. Its power is always destructive. It robs the mind's efficiency, disturbs the natural functions of the intricate organs of the body, and dulls the human spirit. Worry is a negative element, and, as Dr. Johnson would say, "there's an end on't!"

Fear is a silent blackmailer, often an imposter. How many times this fear has throttled our honest beliefs, diverted our train of thought, and left us confused—temporarily bankrupt. There is no defense against fear so potent as religion. In the New Testament you will come across this line: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear." When we pursue the right, no fear can dog us.

People who are moved by fear nearly always move in the wrong direction. Fear can even become a matter of habit. Perhaps it is our most destructive habit. But how quickly courage and faith shove it aside! There is not a weapon in all diplomatic use so powerful and effective as just plain courage. In our daily lives it is our greatest ally.

Anxiety over what may happen can even lower one's capacity to meet the emergency that does happen. Most worries, however, are but wasted energy over what does not happen. Even worry about the weather sprinkles us with the moisture of defeat—for haven't we learned that we can do nothing about it, anyway? Today is ours. Tomorrow will take care of itself!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Good Enough."

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER
When in front of candy shops
With displays of lollipops,
Chocolate bars and chocolate drops,
And a pair—
Nine and seven of different gender—
Would you fight to make this tender:
"Unconditional surrender!"
Then and there?

Would you heed that precious pair,
Watery-mouthed, and fall to care?
Would you play the tightwad there,
Hard of heart,
Or accept the terms they render:
"Unconditional surrender!"
And step in and be a spender
At the start.

In their eyes began to shine
At the sight of such a line
Of a merchandise so fine,
Passing by,
Would you answer them discreetly,
Putting off their pleadings neatly,
Or surrender there completely,
As did I?

Returned: Our citizens will be glad to notice in the appointments of the Methodist Episcopal church, that Rev. Jesse B. Young has been returned to this circuit for another year, making his third year in Gettysburg. Mr. Young has been doing a good work for his church in this place, and enjoys the entire confidence of Christians of all denominations.

Returned: Capt. E. C. Welty, who went to the National Soldiers' Home, near Dayton, Ohio, some months ago for special treatment of wounds received in the War for the Suppression of the Rebellion, and which had been giving him a good deal of trouble ever since, has returned entirely cured.

EX-FUEHRER OF GERMAN WOMEN 'STILL A NAZI'

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

It's shocking, but not very surprising, to hear from Frau Gertrud Scholz-Klink Heissmeyer, Fuehrer of German women in the Hitlerian era, that she is "still a Nazi—as much as ever."

Frau Heissmeyer and her husband, Maj. Gen. August Heissmeyer, one-time officer in Hitler's hand-picked elite guard, have been arrested in Wuerttemberg where they had been living under the name of Stuckabrock. They are being held by the French to determine what, if any, charges shall be brought against them.

The female fuehrer clenched her fist as she proclaimed to members of the press: "Hitler still lives for me and my husband!"

Of course that's what one would expect from a hard-boiled Nazi Chieftainess. Still as remarked, it's shocking thus to be brought face to face with a harsh reminder that while Hitler is as dead as a door-nail, his totalitarian creed lives on. And it persists not only in Germany but has close imitators in other countries.

One of the most difficult of the allied problems—and one of the most vital—is how to democratize Germany and make it a peaceful nation. Frau Heissmeyer's attitude is that of an unnumbered host of her countrymen. Most of them are more discreet—or perhaps one should say secretive—than she with their language in public, but they harbor in their hearts what she is bold enough to say.

Nobody knows how many Germans still carry a picture of Hitler in their hearts. The only figure I have heard was given me by the military authorities in the British zone of occupation. They said that the toughest group to democratize was that between the ages of 14 and 35, which Hitler had thoroughly Nazified. The British held that these folk were about lost to the allies.

That places a terrific handicap on the allies, for within this group are the parents of a new generation. Their children are being taught democracy in the schools, and go home to have it argued out of their young minds by Nazi fathers and mothers whose influence in most cases outweighs that of strangers.

So the ideological de-lousing of Germany is going to take many long years, during which allied troops will have to be maintained in the country—unless the allies are prepared to gamble with world peace. In this connection a fresh worry has developed—one which is causing concern right now in the five-nation conference in Brussels to try to effect a western European union. This is the fear that the German Nazis and the Russians might join forces against the rest of Europe. And that's not such a far-fetched idea. Both the Nazis and the Reds are totalitarian minded, and both are bent on conquest. The question of whether they can work together is answered when we look back to the partition of Poland between Berlin and Moscow in '39.

Yes, the democratization of Germany is one of the keys to the palace of peace.

SEEK BODIES IN FACTORY RUINS

Waltham, Mass., March 8 (AP)—Police and fire officials searched the ruins of a plastics factory today for two men missing and believed killed in a Saturday night explosion that took two other lives and injured 29, five critically.

The bodies of two workmen—charred so badly they could not be identified immediately—were removed from the wreckage of the Interlake Chemical corporation's two-story cement and stucco plant.

The explosion was heard for 10 miles and left the plant of the makers of "Makalot" plastic dishes and novelties a seared mass of girders and heavy machinery piled eight feet deep.

Fire Chief B. A. Neal said most of the survivors apparently were blown clear of the building and that some were shot 50 feet into the air and 75 to 100 feet away from the building.

Neal said the blast occurred during a change in shifts at the suburban Boston factory. It was followed, the chief added, by a roaring fire which immediately enveloped the building. Neal estimated damage at "about $150,000."

Mrs. Ruth Melanson, a nurse who aided in getting the injured to hospitals, said she was reminded of the Coconut Grove night club blaze in Boston in 1942 when nearly 500 persons perished.

Philadelphia, March 8 (AP)—William Ellet, 18, has been sentenced to an indefinite period at White Hill for starting a $500,000 fire that destroyed the Globe Solvite company plant February 6. He was convicted yesterday.

Philadelphia, March 8 (AP)—Charles Williams, 22, has been exonerated in the killing of an intruder in his uncle's tailor shop last January 22. Quarter Sessions Judge Louis E. Levinthal freed the youth yesterday. He had been held in $1,000 bail by the coroner on a homicide charge.

NO SCARCITY OF SEED FOR GARDENS NOW

Remember the Victory Garden rush in 1942? When realization of what war would do to the food supply began to sink in, seed stores were swamped by customers, and many had to close their doors until stocks of seeds were replenished.

This spring a similar rush by Freedom gardeners may be expected, but it will find the seedsmen much better prepared to meet it. In 1943 many stores were called upon to supply as much as eight times the quantity of vegetable seeds they had been accustomed to selling.

Even should Freedom Gardens in 1948 equal in number the 22,000,000 Victory Gardens of 1943, the increased seed demand will not be doubled over 1947, and supplies are ample to take care of it.

Freedom gardeners will not be the novices that Victory gardeners were in that first year. The heavy demand in 1943 was due in part to over-ordering; many stores were told of back yard gardeners who bought enough beans to seed several acres, when they had room for only a few rows.

There are now more families experienced in gardening in this country than ever before, even in the days when, if fresh vegetables were to be served, they had to be grown in the backyard, because in most localities there was no other source.

The number is near the peak reached in 1943, though not all gardening families grow vegetables last year. Even as early as 1944, flower seeds sales began to climb, as Victory gardeners who had sown their first seeds in vegetable plots, broadened their operations and added flower borders to their gardens.

Vegetable seed sales declined slowly until 1946, when they stood at about two-thirds the peak which had been reached in 1943; and last year they began to expand again.

But flower seed sales continued high, indicating that most Victory gardeners continue to till the soil, though some thought the need for growing their own vegetables had passed when the war ended.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson's call for twenty-million Freedom Gardens in 1948 will thus be answered by an army of experienced home gardeners, who have proved their ability to maintain an abundance of vegetable foods in America. They will enlist for the duration, and many experts believe that if abundance is to prevail, and the high cost of living to be kept in bounds, they may never again lay down their hoes.

Guerrillas Are Outlawed By Roxas

Manila, March 8 (AP)—The colorful Hukbalahap guerrillas Saturday were formally outlawed by President Manuel Roxas.

The president told a special press conference the government has evidence linking the Communist party with the central Luzon armed peasant organization, which was formed to resist Japanese occupation.

Roxas cited 95 encounters between the Huk and units of the Philippine army since April 26, 1946—shortly after his election as president of the Philippine commonwealth. (Roxas automatically became president of the republic on Philippine Independence Day, July 4, 1946).

He asserted that there had been a plot against his life at the time of the election, and that evidence in possession of the Department of Justice showed the Huk aimed at "the forcible overthrow of the government."

BRIEF FACTS ABOUT FERTILIZERS

Commercial fertilizer is not a substitute for natural soil fertility. It returns its biggest dividends in increased plant vigor and greater production, where the soil is otherwise fertile and abundantly supplied with organic matter.

In most cases livestock manure contributes greater value in the organic matter it brings to garden and field soils. Many growers over-estimate the actual plant food contents of manure. For example, 1,000 pounds of ordinary stable manure from horses contains from 5 to 7 pounds of nitrogen, 3 to 5 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 5 to 6 pounds of potash. In other words, it would require a ton of high grade horse manure to equal 100 pounds of a 14-10-12 mixture of commercial fertilizer in terms of actual nutrients.

This comparison does not by any means seek to suggest that manures do not benefit garden and other crop soils. They furnish a readily available supply of the three main elements in addition to the almost indispensable store of organic matter (decomposing vegetable matter) they contain.

Ashes are greatly and widely valued as a fertilizer. In fact, it is a frequent experience to hear tales of prodigious results obtained from applications of wood or coal ashes. What are the facts about these materials?

Wood ashes, if kept protected from rain and snow, furnish a small percentage of potash, but no nitrogen. Too, they impart an alkalinizing effect. But it requires about 1,000 pounds of fresh wood ashes to equal a 100-pound bag of fertilizer approximately a 0-15-40 strength.

Few vegetable growers use commercial fertilizers at sufficient rates to gain their fullest value. Applications of 800 to 2,000 pounds per acre are often made by experienced market gardeners, particularly for such crops as potatoes.

Experience proves that fertilizer for potatoes should be placed in two rows, outside and slightly lower than the position of the seed potatoes. Such placement of plant foods greatly increases tuber yields over direct applications in the row.

Most vegetables which produce their edible parts above the ground, excepting tomatoes and possibly cucumbers, melons and pumpkins, should be side dressed at least twice during their growing season with nitrogenous fertilizer. Nitrogen stimulates leaf growth. On such crops as cabbage, lettuce, broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, and sweet corn, one or more side dressings with nitrogen, especially when growth is slow, speeds up growth, increases yields, and improves vegetable quality.

Beans and peas are excepted from this side-dressing advice because they are legumes and have the power to draw their own nitrogen from the air.

It is seldom necessary or even advisable to apply a different strength of fertilizer for each garden crop. In average loams that are well drained, alkaline and quite liberally balanced with organic matter, 4-12-4 or a 6-8-6 mixture serves satisfactorily.

In the minds of almost all gardeners, experienced and beginner alike, there are many unanswered questions about fertilizers and their use. The editor urges readers with such questions to write him before gardening work begins. Merely enclose a 3-cent stamp to cover reply postage, and write as often as desired.

BACKGROUND FOR LARKSPURS

A good use for a gray stone garden wall is as a background for light and dark blue varieties of hardy larkspur (delphinium). The picture may be brightened further with hardy foxglove (digitalis ambigua) and false lupine (thermopsis), both of which have gorgeous yellow spikes. In the open border, round masses of feverfew (matricaria capensis) and varieties of hardy white phlox give pleasing contrast in form.

The gardener who has been foresighted enough to sow seeds of hardy annuals outdoors in late autumn or very early spring can expect June blossoms from cornflower, calliopsis, gaillardia, linaria, phlox and swan river daisy. If he is fortunate in having a greenhouse or hot bed for starting early seedlings, this last may also include pansy, snapdragon and stock.

ANNUAL WILL RESPOND WELL TO EARLY START

Although patience is one of the virtues of most gardeners, methods to speed up results always are eagerly sought, says Alfred L. Putz in the New York Herald Tribune. The practice of starting annual flower seeds indoors before they could possibly be sown in the open has found universal acceptance because it advances and lengthens the blooming season. Comparatively little attention, however, has been given to the same idea as it affects perennials.

There are quite a few popular perennials which would come into flower within one season if another two months of favorable growing weather were available. By starting these early indoors, this extra time is not hard to gain. Late February or early March sowings in the house make it possible to condense into one season what in most cases would require at least a season and a half.

Of course, the number of species which can be handled successfully in this manner is restricted, but several of our favorite perennials respond satisfactorily.

Hardy Gaillardia, Coreopsis, Anthemium and Pyrethrum may be placed at the head of the list, not merely because of their universal appeal but because they are very easy to grow.

Korean Chrysanthemums and related early strains are of even greater importance to many gardeners than the ones just mentioned. Started soon, they will develop into full-sized plants covered with colorful flowers late this fall. Shasta Daisies (Chrysanthemum leucanthemum) also should bloom moderately late this year if sown now.

Delphinium grandiflorum, often called chinensis, with its rather loosely branched flower stems is another fine perennial responding well to such treatment, coming into bloom in the fall when cool nights contribute to its perfection and lasting qualities. Pacific Hybrid Delphinium, and the various other strains of similar habit also have a good chance to develop a limited number of showy flower spikes, although this type is more difficult to grow to perfection in our climate than the grandiflorum varieties.

Another splendid perennial which blooms the first year from seed is Papaver nudicaule, or Iceland Poppy. This should be good news to the many gardeners who regularly lose their plants because of unfavorable winter conditions. Papaver anemone, the Yellow Wonder Poppy, which looks like a glorified yellow Iceland Poppy, also responds to an early indoor start. Because Poppies are notoriously difficult to transplant, the seeds should be sown in small pots to eliminate any root disturbance when they are set into the garden.

Furthermore, there are the strains of Sweet William, hollyhock and Canterbury Bells offered as annuals. These are really quick-growing biennials, and to get the most out of them an early indoor start is advised for our section.

Even Bellis, or English Daisy, which is primarily a spring bloomer, responds well to early indoor sowing but, of course, its flowering season falls much later in the year. Platycodon or Chinese Bellflower is likely to give a good flower spike as fall approaches. Plant it where it will not be disturbed for years to

Red Spider Mites Cause Rose Damage

Red spider mites have caused considerable damage to outdoor roses in the last few years. Hot and dry conditions are favorable to their development. They are tiny, hardly visible to the naked eye. A fine webbing on the undersides of the leaves indicates their presence. They suck obtain the finest results.

Various species of Achillea or Yarrow, as well as Linum perenne (Blue Flax), Myosotis palustris (Marsh Forget-me-not) and even Tunicia, that delightful slender-stemmed rock garden plant, are worth the extra trouble of starting indoors to have them bloom before winter arrives again.

Good drainage of the seed containers, plenty of light and not too much heat at any time are the basic requirements for success.

Chapter 7

Two hours after Mrs. Konak Magila had given birth to an eight-pound boy, the incident had become public event in Lakeport. Women latched onto it in their homes and en discussed it on street-corners as they met one another on their way to work.

The announcement brought varied responses. To Jimmy, or Chaka (his Eskimo name, the fact that it was the center of attraction went unheeded; he cried when he was angry, gurgled when he was happy, and let it go at that. To Mrs. Magila, the event and the attention were a joyous personal triumph. To instant Framingham, Carolyn and en Major Billy Fortune, it was the break the Lakeport Zoo ever enjoyed.

But for Eddie Gale, following one light in which the other two Ma-la children crawled over, under and around his cot in the family unit like tireless termites, the return of Steve from the hospital, a few hours after the birth, was a second Emancipation Proclamation. He congratulated Steve, presented him with a box of cigars to offer to employees in celebration of his new son's arrival, and was plodding listlessly toward his car when Carolyn called to him across the zoo-yard:

"Hall, the conquering hero!" she laughed. "Honestly, though, Eddie, you were a wonderful sport to tackle that assignment."

"Hero?" he echoed hollowly. "I feel more like Hector after his third trip around Troy at the tail of Achilles' chariot — hero, my eye!" He wagged his head mournfully. "They're nice kids, but Lord, what energy! Made me think of a million atom bombs, fired in series."

For the next few days, Steve Magila was the happiest man at the zoo. Thousands of children sought out the Eskimo exhibit, riding the dog sled, mounted on small wheels to carry it over the grass, as Steve drove his team of Huskies around the yard. Scores of kids pressed him for autographs, which he scrawled laboriously but with complete good nature, in his stilted, unpracticed hand.

At the end of a week, however, Dr. Van Karl had noticed Mrs. Magila developing a slight cold, and held her at the hospital a few days more to clear it up. She improved rapidly; but no faster than Steve, missing her acutely, grew disconsolate.

"Before, she had baby at home," he told Carolyn gloomily. "I can see her in hospital, sure — but too long in between."

Carolyn did her best to cheer him up, and for the rest of that day, she seemed restored to his typically bright spirits.

The next day he disappeared from the zoo.

"Great cats!" Major Fortune told Carolyn excitedly. "The little guy lit out early — doggone if I know where. All I know is, them two kids is howlin' their heads off. I got two men over at that tent tryin' to cool them off."

"Have they had any breakfast?" Carolyn asked.

Fortune removed his military cap, holding it in his fingers while he scratched his coarse, kinky hair with the tip of his forefinger.

"Dunno if any of them lame-brains thought of it," he said. "Think they'd have sense enough to do it, without me tellin' 'em!"

"I should think someone would," Carolyn said sharply. "I'll see to it."

Carolyn took over the job efficiently, greeting Al and Jennie warmly, hugging them until they had ceased crying. Then she set about preparing them a breakfast from the larger and small electric stove in the tent. Wires had been strung to the tent from the zoo buildings, and the stove produced a hot breakfast within a few minutes. After the meal, with the tots tagging happily at her heels, Carolyn went to her office to telephone Eddie Gale.

"I don't know how to make this sound pleasant," she said seriously, while the kids played in a heap of sand just outside the building. "But Steve has disappeared — just walked out early this morning."

"What — MORE trouble?" Eddie fairly shouted. "Have you notified the police? Who's taking care of the kids?"

Carolyn smiled a little, despite her concern.

"Don't let me frighten you that much," she answered. "I'm taking care of the kids all right. But I haven't called in the police; I'm sure Steve's not in danger; he's just feeling low without his wife. Have you any idea where he might go?"

"How about the hospital?" he asked. "That would be a logical possibility, with his wife there."

"Fortune says Framingham already has men watching there," Carolyn said. "Incidentally, the boss is afraid if word of this gets out, our whole publicity scheme will backfire."

Gale considered the situation for a moment.

"He's certainly right on that!" he conceded. "Boy, what a shelling we'd receive. Meanwhile, we've got a responsibility to that whole family." He issued something that sounded like a groan of resignation.

"Nurse-maid last week: gumshoe this week! Keep those kids happy if you can; here I go into the wilderness. I'll call you if I can get any kind of a line on the missing Papa."

Framingham called in the early afternoon, increasingly disturbed. He could only inform her that no trace of Steve had been found. At 5 p. m., Eddie Gale called.

"Brace yourself," he said warningly. "I checked two bars near the zoo; figured Steve might try dousing his gloom. Two bartenders saw him; told me he's headed east on foot, tighter than a drum. I'm after him; thought you'd like to know."

"Tight?" Carolyn felt a heart shock. "Lordy, that's awful! His wife is coming out here tomorrow with the baby — she won't let the hospital hold her any longer!"

Chapter 8

Steve Magila, having sampled the stock of five different bars, zigzagged eastward along Hogan street as if battling his way against an Arctic willow of gale proportions.

Steve had only one immediate problem. It was solved when he looked up, focusing his black eyes with difficulty, at a bright neon sign reading "Dugan's Gardens." Using the sign as kind of lighthouse in the gathering darkness, Steve staggered toward it and opened the first door he encountered. He stepped hopefully into a large, brightly-lit room filled with shouting, hilarious men.

"Hey, who's the new guy?" belted a barrel-chested man with a beer-stein in his hand. He advanced unsteadily toward Steve planting his feet carefully to maintain balance. "You a driver, bud?"

Steve nodded, grinning broadly.

"Sure, I drive," he answered. "Drive dog sled lots times; you want learn how?"

A dog sled? How the hell do you like that, fellow? He turned to the wobbly, gurgling crowd of men who had followed him toward the door. "What the heck does this guy think he is — an Eskimo?"

The idea struck the members of the Brewery Drivers Club, gathered for their annual stag party, as the greatest joke of the evening. They howled, slapping one another on the backs.

Steve smiled back at them, adding helpfully:

"Sure, I'm Eskimo. But how you know? I ain't got no Eskimo clothes."

One of the men, polt-hing off a double shot of rye at a gulp, eyed the newcomer with frowning suspicion.

"Very funny," he said sourly. "How we know this here bum ain't some company spy, huh? The guy says he ain't got no Eskimo suit. Ya ask me — he's just some Slovak, or maybe a Rooshian."

The barrel-chested man, pausing to drain the beer stein, confronted Steve again:

"Howsa about it, bud? Kin you prove yer a certified, honest-to-God Eskimo?"

"Sure," Steve responded, reaching into his pocket and removing his wallet. From it, he extracted a snapshot of himself and his family in full Eskimo costume and held it up for the inspection of the brewery drivers.

"Doggone if he ain't the real bonded article!" said one.

There was another laugh, but the skeptical member persisted:

"Them pictures don't prove nothin'; maybe they're a bunch of fakes. Toss the bum out on his ear, I say."

"Wait a minute!" said the barrel-chested man indignantly. "Who's running this outfit, anyhow?" He hitched up his trousers.

Chapter 9

A deceptive interlude of comparative serenity came to the Lakeport Zoo following the departure of the Eskimo family for their home in Alaska.

They had been gone almost two weeks when Lamont Framingham broke the spell of peace in a telephone call to Carolyn Martell.

"It seems that certain persons in this city are determined to make the creation of a worthwhile zoo as difficult as possible," he told her grimly. "I have just learned that a taxpayer's suit has been filed in the city courts, contesting the museum's right to manage the zoo."

"But that's awful — and so unfair!" Carolyn protested. "Why would anyone want to do a thing like that?"

"Ostensibly, because we are supposed to be endangering the civil service standing of the zoo employees," he replied.

"That's absurd; we haven't threatened a single employee," Carolyn asked, after a moment. "Who's filing the suit?"

"Some person called Wilbert Jones," Framingham told her, indicating his annoyance and puzzlement. "I confess the name is totally unfamiliar to me; I assume he is acting as a stalking-horse — perhaps for some of our opposition in the City Council."

"We're certainly not going to let them get away with it!" Carolyn announced. Unconsciously, the set of her well-moulded chin took on a resolute — even stubborn — aspect.

"How can I help you fight them?" Framingham was so surprised and pleased at her instant response to the challenge, that for a single, rare moment, he lost his habitually judicial manner of speaking.

"Now you're talking!" he said spontaneously — coughing a second letter to mask his confusion at his own forthrightness. "That is to say," he continued with more gravity, "I am delighted to learn that you are just as determined to fight this as I am." He hesitated, then continued: "We must find out just who is behind this lawsuit; that may supply the clue we need to fight it effectively. I can only advise you to be on the watch for anything that will help to clarify this riddle."

She still had the problem weighing on her mind when she walked into the zoo's administration building to encounter Major Billy Fortune locking the door of his office.

"Say — that sure was bad news this morning!" he blurted out when he saw her.

"What bad news?" said Carolyn blandly.

"The lawsuit!" he answered blusteringly. "You mean Framingham didn't tell you?"

"Oh — that." Carolyn had no intention of advertising her feelings to Fortune, whom she could not bring herself to trust. She remembered the runaway elephant incident too well. "Certainly he told me about it. I don't see how I can do anything about it, though."

Fortune's small, cunning eyes narrowed in mild surprise.

"You mean you don't care nothin' about it?" he said testily.

"What am I supposed to do?" Carolyn asked innocently. "Jump up in the air and scream?"

Fortune thrust out his pendulous lower lip, and his keg-like body seemed to swell with gathering indignation.

"Do?" he demanded in his rasping voice. "Why you ought to get out and fight this scoundrel, whoever he is — Wilberforce, or whatever his name is!"

Carolyn stood looking after him for a long time, her brow furrowed. She remembered, finally, that she had an appointment to meet Eddie Gale in her office for a picture assignment and erased the incident from her mind as she hurried to meet him.

The sight of Eddie lifted her spirits considerably. They talked briefly of the lawsuit and proceeded to the task of photographing the zoo's new pair of Bengal Tigers, purchased from the increased profits of the zoo's refreshment stand concessions during the heavily-attended engagement of the Eskimo family. She watched admiringly, reluctant to interrupt, as Eddie shot pictures of the animals, sometimes within range of their great claws, but with a sureness and ease of movement that seemed to dissuade the fierce pair from charging at him.

As she looked at him, the depths of her blue eyes carried a hint of distant horizons, warm and pleasant to the heart's sight. When he had completed the pictures, she snapped back to reality and a thought which had been returning to her mind since she met Fortune.

"You know," she said absently, when they were seated in her tiny office. "I can't help wondering about Fortune; he was so emphatic about fighting this lawsuit. He was fusing and storming over it — yet he couldn't remember the name of the man who started the whole thing! Doesn't that strike you as odd?"

"A little too much protest, you mean?" Eddie asked. She nodded affirmatively and he resumed. "Know anything about Jones?"

"A few facts I dug up," she half-apologized. "He's a small building contractor, runs the Safe-Bilt Building company; has about 10 men working for him. Oh, and one thing more — the company used to be called the Right-Way Builders. But this was five years ago."

"Say, wait'll I make a phone call," he said, excitedly. She listened while he talked to the librarian of the newspaper where he had formerly worked. When he hung up, she was able to reconstruct most of the conversation.

"The Right-Way Builders, which is Jones," he announced, "put up a zoo building for Fortune five years ago. The state auditor screamed that it was a mess of graft, and Fortune barely squeaked out of it when his political friends stopped the state investigation. There's the man behind the lawsuit — Fortune, in person."

"Can we prove it?" Carolyn asked anxiously.

"Suppose we do; then Framingham will want to can him immediately," he said soberly. "Can you see how the politicians would pounce on that?"

USED FATS WERE STILL BADLY NEEDED!

Lady, where have you been? Used fats are needed now more than ever, because the shortage of fats and oils today is the greatest in the world's history. Our government warns us that the supply cannot meet today's industrial needs. You can help prevent this supply from getting too low by continuing to turn in used fats.

You say you re-use them for cooking? Fine! But even the drops left after that are worth salvaging. How about melting down fat trimmings, skimming gravies? Those tricks yield plenty!

And come to think of it, what other kitchen waste can you convert into good hard cash? It's a point to remember, these days of high food costs! Butchers pay for used fats. So please... don't throw your fats away. Turn 'em in!

Main Line Divorcee Found In Hotel, Dies

Philadelphia, March 8 (P)—A main line divorcee died without regaining consciousness shortly after she was found in her central city hotel suite.

The woman was identified by detectives as Mrs. Marjorie Booth Hiestand, 40-year-old social registerite who owned and operated the Ardmore book shop in Suburban Ardmore.

She was found in a coma yesterday in her hotel room by a visitor who summoned a physician. The doctor had her removed to Pennsylvania hospital where she died.

Deputy Coroner Charles Cohn said an empty bottle of sleeping tablets, prescribed last week by a physician, was found in the woman's room. Cohn said an autopsy would be performed to determine whether the woman died of an overdose of sleeping tablets.

Amputate Arm Of Captured Bandit

Pottsville, Pa., March 8 (P)—The right arm of Harry Turkes, one of three men charged with armed robbery in a coal breaker holdup, was amputated six inches below the shoulder today.

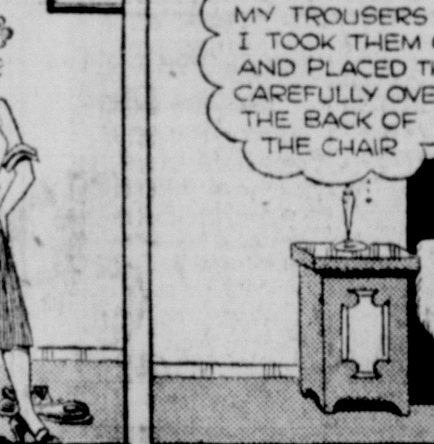

Dr. A. S. Ryland, surgeon at Pottsville hospital, said the 29-year-old Wilkes-Barre man was in "satisfactory" condition, but added there was a strong possibility of complications.

Police fired six bullets into Turkes' arm and shoulder after the holdup of the Colitz coal breaker Wednesday night. The net loot was $190, said Police Chief Leo Dugan.

Turkes and Joseph Rogers, 45, also of Wilkes-Barre, were ordered to Schuylkill county prison without bail following a hearing before Magistrate W. E. Gregory Thursday.

DE GAULLE'S SPEECH STIRS FRENCH REDS

Paris, March 8 (AP)—Gen. Charles DeGaulle's call for U. S. help for an organization of western European states to oppose Russia claimed the top interest of French politicians and newspapers today.

DeGaulle, first provisional president of reconquered France, declared at Campagne yesterday he was ready to take over power whenever called upon. He said also the U. S. aid to western Europe should extend to the field of defense.

Paris-Press, a supporter of the general, said, "events force DeGaulle not to wait longer."

Stirs Communists
The Communist Ce Soir said De-

Gaulle "declared war on the republic." The article said DeGaulle and Premier Robert Schuman's government speak the same language and have "an exasperating anti-Communist attitude and a total submission to the foreign policy of America."

Intransigent, independent rightist newspaper, said the union DeGaulle advocated was against the Communists and "only the Communists, of course, would be excluded."

France Soir, independent centerist newspaper, commented: "Gen. DeGaulle demands power. He seems to have renounced demanding dissolution of parliament, one of his previous conditions to taking over power. Revision of the constitution no longer appears so urgent in his eyes."

Hails U. S. Generosity
The wartime Free French leader came out for the first time with the first statement that German states, "federating as they wish, would

The host pastor, the Rev. David S. Kammerer, was in charge of the devotion which included the reading of Galatians 5:16-26. Roy Hoover, York, had charge of the music. The director of the panel was introduced by the Rev. Grantas E. Hoopert, pastor of the Centenary Methodist church. The Rev. Dr. Poulson is evangelist for the Central Pennsylvania conference of the Methodist church; superintendent for 29 counties of the Pennsylvania Temperance League and state legislative director for the league.

Dr. Poulson said: "Temperance groups are now approaching this naturally find their place in the grouping of other European states." He said the same went for Austria and a Ruhr "with its own special regime."

DeGaulle hailed the "clear-sighted generosity" of the United States in lending Europe "large and prolonged help in the economic field."

"But it is clear," he said, "that their support should spread at the same time to the fields of defense in as precise and explicit a manner as the Marshall plan does on credits and imports. An economic, diplomatic and strategic group must be formed among the free states of Europe, linking together production, their exchanges, their foreign activities and means of defense," he said.

There will be a sermon and benediction in St. Aloysius church, Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. Following this service, the adult class will meet for their weekly instruction.

The host pastor, the Rev. David S. Kammerer, was in charge of the devotion which included the reading of Galatians 5:16-26. Roy Hoover, York, had charge of the music. The director of the panel was introduced by the Rev. Grantas E. Hoopert, pastor of the Centenary Methodist church. The Rev. Dr. Poulson is evangelist for the Central Pennsylvania conference of the Methodist church; superintendent for 29 counties of the Pennsylvania Temperance League and state legislative director for the league.

Dr. Poulson said: "Temperance groups are now approaching this naturally find their place in the grouping of other European states." He said the same went for Austria and a Ruhr "with its own special regime."

DeGaulle hailed the "clear-sighted generosity" of the United States in lending Europe "large and prolonged help in the economic field."

"But it is clear," he said, "that their support should spread at the same time to the fields of defense in as precise and explicit a manner as the Marshall plan does on credits and imports. An economic, diplomatic and strategic group must be formed among the free states of Europe, linking together production, their exchanges, their foreign activities and means of defense," he said.

highway through bank loans rather than by floating a bond issue. It was felt, authentic sources said, that a great deal of money could be saved on interest charges if this method is followed.

"Commission engineers were reported to be favoring the northern route after careful consideration of aerial surveys of three possible courses.

Three Routes Surveyed

"In general, the surveys were concerned with these possibilities.

"1. A middle route that would have run southeastward through the rich farmlands of Lancaster county.

"2. A southern route that would have swung southeastward from Carlisle to York and thence across the Susquehanna and eastward.

"3. The northerly route, crossing the Susquehanna below Harrisburg, running toward Lebanon and then passing about 10 miles south of Reading on its eastward course.

"The probability that the northern route will be chosen was indicated after an aerial survey that cost about $86,000 and took several months.

Vague on Exact Plans

"Informants were necessarily vague on exact plans because of the danger of land speculation. For the same reason they were silent on what improvements are contemplated to improve the highway system between King of Prussia, which is on Route 202 in Montgomery county, and the Philadelphia city line.

"It was expected that some announcement might be forthcoming on the detailed plan within a few weeks.

"Governor Duff announced Sunday that he had discussed in broad terms the eventual handling of the traffic which will flow in and out of the extended Turnpike with a group from Philadelphia and the Main Line.

"They are vigorously in favor of the extension of the Turnpike, he said."

The Turnpike commission did not comment.

Two Buildings In N. Phila. Collapse

Philadelphia, March 8 (AP)—Two adjoining three-story buildings in North Philadelphia collapsed today. Tons of debris were scattered and overhead wires were ripped off.

Cracking noises and falling plaster warned 14 persons who fled in one of the buildings an hour before the collapse. The other building was unoccupied. It housed the Mother Bethlehem Baptist church.

Mrs. Emma Graves, 31, said she was awakened at 5 a. m. when a piece of plaster fell from the ceiling and hit her in the face. She rushed through the hallway, dodging more plaster, and awakened the other occupants.

Police Captain Robert Strange and two other patrolmen were summoned. The cracks were louder when they arrived. "They sounded like rifle shots," Strange said. Strange said there was no immediate explanation of the collapse, but added residents told him plaster had been falling for some time.

Belgian Prince Is Visiting Pa. Mines

Pittsburgh, March 8 (AP)—The exiled heir apparent to the Belgian throne, a shy lad of 17, was eager today for his first look at American coal mines—and coal miners.

Prince Baudouin, Duke of Brabant and tall as he is shy, arrived last night from New York. He was accompanied by the Viscount Gatien Du Parc.

John Busarello, district No. 5 president of the unaffiliated United Mine Workers, prepared to conduct the prince on his tour of coal mines. The viscount said the prince "is very keen on mines and things like that."

The prince said he was interested in economics, a subject in which he's majoring while at school in Switzerland. He indicated he was particularly interested in seeing homelife of miners.

TWO U.S. WOMEN REPORTED SLAIN

Paris, March 8 (AP)—A French communique from Saigon announced today the slaying of two American women employed at the U. S. consulate general in Indochina.

The bodies of the women, Jeanne R. Skewes and Lydia Ruth James—were found last night in a dry river bed into which they had driven a jeep. They had been shot to death.

"The two bodies bore bullet wounds, particularly in the head," said the communique, reported by the French press agency.

"Before withdrawing, the attackers had set fire to the car."

"There has been no explanation of the reasons which led these two girls to such a distant spot, unfrequented by Europeans."

The location was given as near the village of Tan Son Nhut, some three miles from Saigon and outside the security zone maintained by the French in their struggle with Nationalist Viet-Namense forces. The bodies were discovered by a French military detachment.

Miss or Mrs. Skewes—accounts differed on whether she was married—was director of the U. S. Information Service in Saigon. Miss James was secretary at the consulate general.

SLUGGED BY THIEVES

Harrisburg, March 8 (AP)—Thieves lured George W. Zimmerman to the basement of his store today by throwing a light switch, then slugged him and escaped with $588. He was treated at Harrisburg hospital for head wounds.

OKAY BOND ISSUE

Harrisburg, March 8 (AP)—The Department of Internal Affairs approved today a $440,000 bond issue for the Braddock borough school district, Allegheny county, to pay current expenses and debt service.

FINAL RUSH OF CANDIDATES

Harrisburg, March 8 (AP)—The state election bureau came up with its biennial headache today—the last day swamp of nominating petitions for the April 27 primary.

Extra clerks came on duty early to handle week-end mail while others were assigned to counters to handle petitions filed personally by candidates.

When the elections bureau closed on Saturday there were 749 petitions on file, with approximately 1,200 more expected before today's deadline at 5 p. m.

Included in the list already filed were petitions to place the name of President Harry S. Truman on the Democratic ballot for re-nomination. J. Warren Mickle, state Democratic chairman, filed petitions from 56 of the state's 67 counties to enter Truman's name in the Presidential preference primary.

Both major parties filed petitions for their candidates for fiscal office, with the Republican first to file, and the Democratic candidates appearing in person on Saturday.

State Senator Weldon B. Heyburn, Delaware county, is the GOP candidate for auditor general, while Charles R. Barber, former mayor of Erie and now Secretary of Welfare, filed for state treasurer. For the Democrats State Treasurer Ramsey S. Black filed for auditor general, and State Senator William J. Lane, of Washington county, became candidate for state treasurer.

Best-Seller Author Commits Suicide

Bloomington, Ind., March 8 (AP)—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Ross Lockridge, Jr., 33, author of the prize-winning novel "Raintree County," who died Saturday night of carbon monoxide poisoning in the garage at his home here.

Dr. Robert E. Lyons, Jr., Monroe county coroner, reported in his finding that Lockridge committed suicide.

The young author left no explanation of his action, which came as he was on the crest of success. "Raintree County," his first novel, was a book-of-the-month club selection. It has been high on best-seller lists since publication. It won Metro Goldwyn-Mayer's $125,000 novel award and is to be made into a motion picture.

Lockridge's father, Ross Lockridge, Sr., said his son's seven years of work on the novel had resulted in a "complete breakdown."

"He put his whole heart into his book," the elder Lockridge said. "He was utterly exhausted."

Lockridge's body was found in his automobile in the lighted garage by his widow, Vernice. The couple has four children.
